

Climate activists declare Shell Must Fall outside shareholders' meeting

The Hague, May 21 (RHC)-- In the Netherlands, dozens of climate activists followed social distancing guidelines as they protested outside the headquarters of Shell Oil in The Hague, where the fossil fuel giant held its annual shareholder meeting.

Greenpeace organizer Helena Spiritus told journalists: "We're in front of Shell's headquarters because we are in the middle of a climate crisis. We're in the middle of a biodiversity crisis and a pandemic, and Shell is still behaving as it's business as usual."

<https://www.radiohc.cu/index.php/en/noticias/internacionales/223425-climate-activists-declare-shell-must-fall-outside-shareholders-meeting>

Radio Habana Cuba