

Canadian province of Ontario to begin Stage 3 of reopening on July 17th

Ottawa, July 14 (RHC)-- Ontario will begin moving most of its health regions into the third stage of its reopening plan from July 17th, Premier Doug Ford has said, as Canada's most populous province lifts lockdowns put in place in March.

Nearly all businesses and public spaces will be allowed to gradually reopen in stage three, according to documents released on Monday. It will also allow gatherings of 50 people indoors and 100 people outdoors, but in all cases individuals have to maintain social distancing of at least two meters (6.56 ft). The previous limit on indoor and outdoor gatherings was ten.
