

Ivanka Trump violates federal ethics laws in endorsement of Goya Foods

Washington, July 17 (RHC)-- Senior White House adviser Ivanka Trump is under fire for violating government ethics rules after she tweeted a photo of herself endorsing Goya Foods while clutching a can of black beans.

The first daughter captioned the photo, "If it's Goya, it has to be good." Her endorsement came amid a boycott of Goya Foods, sparked by CEO Robert Unanue, who lavished praise on President Trump at a White House event last week.

Ivanka Trump's tweet appears to violate a federal law prohibiting the use of public office for private gain.

Earlier this week, as U.S. coronavirus deaths topped 137,000, Donald Trump's Instagram account tweeted a photo of the president grinning and flashing a "thumbs up" over an array of Goya Foods products on the Resolute Desk in the Oval Office.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/index.php/en/noticias/internacionales/228884-ivanka-trump-violates-federal-ethics-laws-in-endorsement-of-goya-foods>

Radio Habana Cuba