

Far-right groups attack anti-racist protesters in several U.S. states

Atlanta, August 17 (RHC)-- Anti-racist protesters were violently attacked by right-wing groups in several cities over the weekend.

In Georgia, a pro-Confederacy rally drew armed, far-right militia members to the Stone Mountain Confederate Memorial in Stone Mountain Park Saturday. They attacked anti-fascist and Black Lives Matter protesters with pepper spray as the counterprotesters chanted "Go home, racists!"

Meanwhile, in Kalamazoo, Michigan, members of the far-right hate group the Proud Boys started attacking counterprotesters who showed up at their rally. The Proud Boys waved American and Trump flags, and shouted racist slogans.

Samuel Robinson, a local Black reporter from MLive, was arrested and briefly detained while covering the protest, despite identifying himself as a member of the press.

In Portland, Oregon, right-wing extremists and members of the "alt-right" group Patriot Prayer organized a small rally, where they shot pellets from paintball guns and pepper spray against counterprotesters.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/index.php/en/noticias/internacionales/231856-far-right-groups-attack-anti-racist-protesters-in-several-us-states>

Radio Habana Cuba