

Indigenous tribe blocks key Brazil grains export route

Brasilia, August 17 (RHC)-- Members of the Kayapo indigenous tribe blocked a key grains transport route in centre-west Brazil, protesting against a lack of government protection from the coronavirus pandemic that has killed several of their elders.

Kayapo wearing warrior body paint and headdresses used tires and wood to block trucks carrying corn on the BR-163 highway, a Reuters witness said.

They were protesting against the so-called Ferrograo railway, set to cross part of the Amazon to connect grain-producing Mato Grosso state to river ports for soy and corn.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/index.php/en/noticias/internacionales/231876-indigenous-tribe-blocks-key-brazil-grains-export-route>

Radio Habana Cuba