

750,000 file for unemployment as 50 million face food insecurity in U.S.

New York, November 7 (RHC)-- In U.S. economic news, another 751,000 people filed for unemployment last week in the United States. Over 30 million have sought unemployment aid since the pandemic began.

This comes as Feeding America warns the number of people facing food insecurity in the U.S. could rise to over 50 million this year, including 17 million children, due to the pandemic.

In other economic news, a real estate company owned in part by White House senior adviser Jared Kushner has submitted eviction filings in court for hundreds of tenants who are behind on rent. The Washington Post reports Westminster Management is preparing to evict the tenants as soon as state and federal moratoriums on evictions expire.
