

California farmworkers infected by coronavirus at three times the rate of other workers

Image not found or type unknown

California's farmworkers have contracted COVID-19 at nearly three times the rate of other state residents.

San Francisco, December 5 (RHC)-- California's farmworkers have contracted COVID-19 at nearly three times the rate of other state residents. That's according to a new study by University of California, Berkeley researchers — the first report to explore how farmworkers are disproportionately affected by the pandemic.

The new report also found farmworkers who only spoke an Indigenous language had higher positivity rates than farmworkers who spoke Spanish or English.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/index.php/en/noticias/internacionales/241573-california-farmworkers-infected-by-coronavirus-at-three-times-the-rate-of-other-workers>

Radio Habana Cuba