

December deadliest month of pandemic in the United States

New York, December 29 (RHC)-- COVID-19 continues to ravage the United States, with cases now topping 19.1 million and over 333,000 deaths. One in every 1,000 Americans has now died from the coronavirus.

December has been the deadliest month in the U.S. since the start of the pandemic, as experts warn things will likely get worse and post-holiday season travel will lead to new spikes. California became the first state to top two million cases last week as hospitals in Southern California are reporting just a handful to no ICU beds available.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/index.php/en/noticias/internacionales/243268-december-deadliest-month-of-pandemic-in-the-united-states>

Radio Habana Cuba