

California university settles for over $1 billion with more than 700 sexually abused women

Image not found or type unknown

The University of Southern California gynecologist George Tyndall behind bars

Los Angeles, March 26 (RHC)-- The University of Southern California has agreed to pay over $1 billion in settlements to more than 700 women who accused former student health center gynecologist George Tyndall of sexually assaulting them.

Last February, a federal investigation concluded the university had mishandled dozens of sexual assault reports against Tyndall, allowing the abuse to continue for years. Survivors have said Tyndall raped or forcibly touched them, and made racist and misogynistic comments while he sexually abused them.

Tyndall was arrested in 2019 and his trial is still pending.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/index.php/en/noticias/internacionales/252042-california-university-settles-for-over-1-billion-with-more-than-700-sexually-abused-women>

Radio Habana Cuba