Teachers and students should wear masks when they return to school — even if they have been vaccinated.

New York, July 20 (RHC)-- The American Academy of Pediatrics recommended all students over the age of two, as well as teachers and staff, wear masks when they return to school — even if they have been vaccinated. However, many U.S. states have already banned school mask mandates.

In related news, a federal judge has ruled Indiana University can proceed with its plan to require all students to get vaccinated before returning to campus. Twitter has temporarily suspended Republican Congressman Marjorie Taylor Greene for posting misinformation about COVID-19 and vaccines.
