Tehran, August 3 (RHC)-- Resistance against Israel has proven that nothing but the language of force is effective in confronting the occupying regime and upholding the Palestinian people's rights, says Iran's foreign minister.

Speaking at an event to celebrate human rights and human dignity on Tuesday, Hossein Amir-Abdollahian reiterated Tehran's support for "the Palestinian issue and the creation of a Palestinian state on the entire mainland and motherland, with al-Quds as its capital."

"We are proud to announce loudly that the experience of the Islamic Revolution, that of the Islamic Republic, and that of the resistance have proven that nothing but the language of force and resistance is effective in confronting the ambitions of the apartheid, fake Zionist regime," he said.

At the same time, the Iranian top diplomat reiterated the Islamic Republic's call for holding a referendum among the "original" inhabitants of Palestine – including Muslims, Christians, and Jews – under the supervision of the United Nations, as a democratic political solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.
