

Video reveals guards' abuse of Florida prisoner who died of broken neck in 2017

Image not found or type unknown

The Miami Herald has published shocking footage showing how 62-year-old Florida prisoner Craig Ridley was left to starve and die after prison guards broke his neck in 2017.

Fort Lauderdale, October 16 (RHC)-- The Miami Herald has published shocking footage showing how 62-year-old Florida prisoner Craig Ridley was left to starve and die after prison guards broke his neck in 2017.

Video taken by a prison official shortly after the catastrophic injury reveals guards ignored Ridley's protests that "My neck is broken," and "I'm paralyzed."

One prison guard stated: "I assisted Sergeant Nettles and placed an inmate on the ground right here. At this time, the inmate is refusing to walk, to go to medical for his post-use-of-force physical and pre-confinement. We got a wheelchair on the way.

The guards repeatedly accused Ridley of faking his injury and hoisted his limp body into a wheelchair. Craig Ridley died on October 12, 2017 — five years ago this week — intubated and unable to communicate.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/index.php/en/noticias/internacionales/302051-video-reveals-guards-abuse-of-florida-prisoner-who-died-of-broken-neck-in-2017>

Radio Habana Cuba