

Indigenous activists interrupt speech by Canadian prime minister at UN Biodiversity Conference

Image not found or type unknown

In Montreal, Canada, the U.N. Biodiversity Conference, COP15, kicked off this week with a stark warning from U.N. Secretary-General António Guterres.?

Montreal, December 8 (RHC)-- In Montreal, Canada, the U.N. Biodiversity Conference, COP15, kicked off this week with a stark warning from U.N. Secretary-General António Guterres.

Secretary-General António Guterres: "With our bottomless appetite for unchecked and unequal economic growth, humanity has become a weapon of mass extinction. We are treating nature like a toilet, and ultimately we are committing suicide by proxy, because the loss of nature and biodiversity comes with a steep human cost, a cost we measure in lost jobs, hunger, diseases and deaths.”

Indigenous and environmental activists disrupted a speech by Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau, holding up a banner that read “Indigenous genocide = ecocide. To save biodiversity, stop invading our lands.”

Meanwhile, a new report by Friends of the Earth reveals corporate interests have steered the writing of the Convention on Biological Diversity, an international conservation treaty.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/index.php/en/noticias/internacionales/307332-indigenous-activists-interrupt-speech-by-canadian-prime-minister-at-un-biodiversity-conference>

Radio Habana Cuba