

U.S. may vaccinate millions of chickens as Avian Influenza spreads

Image not found or type unknown

The Joe Biden administration is considering a plan to vaccinate millions of chickens against avian influenza. The plan comes amid the worst outbreak of the viral disease in U.S. history, which has killed tens of millions of domesticated chickens, turkeys and ducks, along with countless wild birds.

Washington, March 9 (RHC)-- The Joe Biden administration is considering a plan to vaccinate millions of chickens against avian influenza. The plan comes amid the worst outbreak of the viral disease in U.S. history, which has killed tens of millions of domesticated chickens, turkeys and ducks, along with countless wild birds.

The outbreak of the disease has been blamed for thousands of sea lion deaths in Peru and has sickened and killed dozens of other species, raising fears it could lead to community spread among humans.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/index.php/en/noticias/internacionales/316153-us-may-vaccinate-millions-of-chickens-as-avian-influenza-spreads>

Radio Habana Cuba