

U.S. city reaches $45 million settlement Black man who was paralyzed in police

Image not found or type unknown

?

New Haven, June 15 (RHC)-- The U.S. city of New Haven, Connecticut, has reached a historic $45 million settlement with Randy Cox, a Black man who was left paralyzed after he was handcuffed and placed in the back of a police van without a seat belt.

After the van made an abrupt stop, Cox slid headfirst into a metal partition, seriously injuring his neck and spine. Officers then ignored his pleas for help.

Five police officers have pleaded “not guilty” to criminal charges including second-degree reckless endangerment.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/index.php/en/noticias/internacionales/325661-us-city-reaches-45-million-settlement-black-man-who-was-paralyzed-in-police>

Radio Habana Cuba