Caracas, July 30 (RHC)-- Venezuelan President Nicolás Maduro expressed his appreciation to those who took to the streets this Saturday to show their support to the Bolivarian Revolution project and in rejection of the unilateral coercive measures imposed by the United States against their country.

Tens of thousands of Venezuelans marched this Saturday in cities and municipalities of at least the following states: Apure, Guárico, Yaracuy, Falcón, Barinas, Aragua, Zulia, Lara, Mérida, Monagas, Trujillo and Sucre in defense of the government headed by President Maduro.

"Na'guará! I am excited to see the streets full of optimism, the people of the Altagracia parish of the Miranda municipality, Zulia state, demonstrating their strength and loyalty for the Bolivarian Revolution," the Venezuelan president wrote on his Twitter account.

"United we will continue fighting for the Peace and prosperity of Venezuela. Nothing and no one will stop us! Forward!", asserted the Bolivarian leader of the South American nation.

The mobilizations, carried out in different parts of the country under the organization of the ruling United Socialist Party of Venezuela (PSUV), were also carried out to show loyalty and support to Commander Hugo Chávez (1954-2013), and for the defense and rights of the nation.

At the same time, Nicolas Maduro pointed to the marches that took place in more than a dozen towns across the country, emphasising that the Venezuelan people are "on their feet, in combat and in permanent revolutionary struggle."
