

Amid record heat in U.S. capital, protesters at White House demand declaration of Climate Emergency

Image not found or type unknown

Washington, September 8 (RHC)-- A record-breaking heat wave is continuing to bring extreme weather alerts to tens of millions of people in the United States. The record temperatures prompted many school districts to cancel outdoor activities like recess or to switch to online classes for the start of the school year.

In Washington, D.C., the high temperature at Dulles International Airport reached triple digits for the first time ever in the month of September. One air traffic controller told reporters: "I think it's not normal. I have lived here for a long time, and this is incredible. Like, we are in September, waiting for fall to come, and suddenly it's 100 degrees outside. So, I think it has to be with the global warming."

On Thursday, Secret Service officers arrested three climate activists after they tied a banner to the White House fence, demanding President Biden declare a climate emergency.

The action came ahead of a March to End Fossil Fuels planned for New York City on September 17.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/index.php/en/noticias/internacionales/333486-amid-record-heat-in-us-capital-protesters-at-white-house-demand-declaration-of-climate-emergency>

Radio Habana Cuba