Havana, November 1 (RHC) -- Cuban Foreign Minister Bruno Rodriguez expressed his gratitude on Wednesday for the support of the international community, which raised its voice at the UNGA, the United Nations General Assembly, against the economic, commercial and financial blockade imposed by the United States on the Caribbean nation.

In his official account in the social network X, the foreign minister expressed that in the debate at the UN the forceful rejection of the international community to that inhumane policy has been manifest, and the demand to exclude Cuba from the list of State sponsors of terrorism.

"Once again, the U.S. government will be isolated in the face of the overwhelming demand of the international community for a better Cuba without blockade", he added using the tags that are moving today in that social network.

Tomorrow, Thursday, the vote will take place to approve the report presented by Cuba which is framed between March 2022 and February 2023, and in which it is explained that the damages and losses to Cuba caused by Washington's policy are calculated in the order of four thousand 867 million dollars.
