

Inter-faith protests demanding Gaza ceasefire continue across the U.S. despite police repression

Image not found or type unknown

Philadelphia, November 3 (RHC)-- In the U.S. state of Pennsylvania, at least 350 people were arrested Thursday in Philadelphia after hundreds of faith leaders and activists blocked a train terminal demanding state and local officials support a ceasefire in Gaza.

Imams, rabbis, reverends, pastors, clerics and Buddhist monks led the massive crowd in traditional songs and prayers, while hundreds more rallied outside the station.

The peaceful action was organized by Philadelphia's chapter of Jewish Voice for Peace.

In North Carolina, dozens of Palestinian solidarity protesters blocked a highway in Durham Thursday during rush hour as they chanted "ceasefire now."

In New York City, dozens of students walked out of a class at Columbia University taught by Hillary Clinton, protesting the school's role in targeting Palestinian solidarity activists. The action came after photographs of students who signed a declaration critical of Israeli's assault on Gaza were featured on doxing trucks parked near campus last week with the words "Columbia's leading antisemites."

The group Accuracy in Media deployed similar doxing trucks at Harvard, CUNY and UPenn. But the attempts to silence a growing protest movement are having little or no effect, as hundreds of thousand continue to turn out for protests across the United States -- the main supporter of Israel's bloody war machine.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/index.php/en/noticias/internacionales/338382-inter-faith-protests-demanding-gaza-ceasefire-continue-across-the-us-despite-police-repression>

Radio Habana Cuba