

New York Times investigates Israeli freelancer's anti- Palestinian social media history

Image not found or type unknown

New York, February 27 (RHC)-- The New York Times has reportedly launched an internal investigation of a freelance Israeli reporter after she liked multiple posts on social media advocating for violence against Palestinians, including one that called for turning Gaza into a slaughterhouse.

In December, the reporter, Anat Schwartz, co-authored a widely criticized article for The New York Times alleging that members of Hamas committed widespread sexual violence on October 7th.

The Intercept recently reported that doubts over the accuracy of the article led the Times to shelving an episode about the issue on its podcast, "The Daily."

<https://www.radiohc.cu/index.php/en/noticias/internacionales/348317-new-york-times-investigates-israeli-freelancers-anti-palestinian-social-media-history>

Radio Habana Cuba