

33,000 Boeing workers in the U.S. go on strike for better pay and improved safety standards

Image not found or type unknown

Seattle, September 13 (RHC)-- Some 33,000 Boeing workers in Washington state and Oregon are walking off the job after overwhelmingly rejecting a new contract.

It's Boeing's first strike in 16 years and will halt production on most of its aircraft, including its troubled 737 MAX.

Workers are seeking pay raises of 40%; the tentative agreement only pledged to raise wages by 25%.

In related news, hotel workers in Boston, New Haven and San Diego have launched the second wave of a phased strike that started at hotels around the country on Labor Day.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/index.php/en/noticias/internacionales/365106-33000-boeing-workers-in-the-us-go-on-strike-for-better-pay-and-improved-safety-standards>

Radio Habana Cuba