

Outspoken Honduran land and water defender Juan López killed

Image not found or type unknown

Tegucigalpa, September 17 (RHC)-- In Honduras, a prominent anti-mining activist was gunned down Saturday as he left a church in his northeastern town of Tocoa.

Juan López was a member of the ruling LIBRE party and campaigned against open-pit iron ore mining.

In a recent interview, Juan Lopez said:

Juan López: “It is not gold or silver or any of these metals which makes a nation wealthy, but it is the agriculture. ... Our voices of dignity and sovereignty have not died; they keep getting stronger.”

A new report by Global Witness found Honduras had the third-highest number of murders of environmental defenders, tied with Mexico, with 18 recorded killings in 2023.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/index.php/en/noticias/internacionales/365266-outspoken-honduran-land-and-water-defender-juan-lopez-killed>

Radio Habana Cuba