Caracas, October 6 (RHC)-- With a great anti-imperialist, anti-Zionist and anti-fascist march, the people of the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela took to the streets this Saturday in solidarity with Palestine and Lebanon and against the Israeli genocide.

76 years after the beginning of Israel's invasion of Palestine and almost 365 of the massacre generated since last October 7, political and social organizations lead the peaceful mobilization.

With flags of Palestine and Lebanon, the demonstrators bet on a political action that promotes the activity of the countries of the world to stop the Zionist genocide. Likewise, it is an antecedent of the humanitarian aid that the Bolivarian Revolution will articulate in this sense.

According to teleSUR's correspondent in Caracas, Osvaldo Zayas, the participants are heading towards the headquarters of the United Nations Organization in Venezuela, to endorse their support to the Palestinian cause and ratify the need to stabilize the situation in Middle East countries.

The Iranian Ambassador to the South American country, Hojat Soltani, participated in the rally. In his words, he condemned the lack of action by the international organization to put an end to the Israeli genocide. He also thanked the Venezuelan people for this show of solidarity.

After a meeting with the Arab Community residing in Venezuela, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, Yván Gil, announced yesterday the creation of a large international and humanitarian brigade, which will attend to the needs of the Palestinian people and mitigate the effects of Israel's extermination actions.

Gil also announced the creation of a large front to condemn the massacre, using all diplomatic and political resources to stop Benjamin Netanyahu's regime.
