

Latin American presidents reject Trump's statements on Gaza

Image not found or type unknown

The position of Latin American presidents also resonates with the growing demand for greater equity in the management of international crises. Photo> EFE.

Havana, February 7 (RHC)-- Criticism of Trump highlights the need for a more balanced and respectful dialogue on issues of human rights and international justice.

The president of Brazil, Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva, has expressed his concern about recent statements by the president of the United States, Donald Trump, who suggested extreme measures against the Palestinian population in the Gaza Strip.

Lula, in an interview with local Brazilian media, warned that Trump was elected to govern his country, not to exercise authority over the rest of the world. The Brazilian president called Trump's proposals "provocations" and "anomalies," urging the US president to establish a more constructive and respectful dialogue with the international community, while stressing the importance of democratic and civilized relations between nations.

For her part, Mexican President Claudia Sheinbaum joined the criticism, emphasizing that her government recognizes both the "Palestinian State" and the "State of Israel." Sheinbaum pointed out the need to seek peaceful solutions to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, stressing that violence will not lead to a sustainable outcome.

Both leaders agreed that Trump's proposals are unacceptable and reflect a lack of sensitivity toward the suffering of the Palestinian people. Lula called Israel's current offensive in Gaza a genocide, further aggravating tensions in the region.

The statements by Lula and Sheinbaum mark a significant moment in Latin American foreign policy, which seeks to defend the right of peoples to self-determination and peace. This contrasts with the more aggressive approaches often associated with U.S. foreign policy.

Meanwhile, from Cuba, President Miguel Díaz-Canel stressed on his Telegram channel that the "attempt by the U.S. to control Gaza and displace the Palestinian population from its territory is an act of ethnic cleansing and an insult to the international community."

Likewise, the Cuban leader described the intention of the Trump administration as "unacceptable but expected from countries that ignore International Law and the most basic standards of human coexistence."

The position of the Latin American presidents also resonates with the growing demand for greater equity in the management of international crises. The international community is closely watching how these statements could influence political dynamics in the region and beyond.

Criticism of Trump highlights the need for a more balanced and respectful dialogue on issues of human rights and international justice. Latin American leaders are calling for a more collaborative approach to addressing unjust suffering in conflicts such as Gaza.

[SOURCE: teleSUR]

<https://www.radiohc.cu/index.php/en/noticias/internacionales/376023-latin-american-presidents-reject-trumps-statements-on-gaza>

Radio Habana Cuba