Mexico City, November 19 (RHC)-- The Daniel Solis Gallardo Caravan, including families of the 43 missing students in Iguala, arrived Tuesday in Amilcingo, Morelos, along with students from 11 teacher training schools in Guerrero and members of Section 22 of the National Coordinator of Education Workers (CNTE).

The caravanistas will meet in the Emiliano Zapata Teacher Training College with members of local communities and social organizations to discuss the Iguala case, and then travel to the town of Amilcingo.

José Luis Luna Torres, 20 years old and one of the 43 students of Ayotzinapa who disappeared, is from Amilcingo and according to the media, more than 300 area residents signed a petition to the Congress of Morelos to demand that he is found alive.

The caravan should arrive today, Wednesday, in Cuernavaca, the state capital of Morelos, and then on to Mexico City's main square, the Zócalo, on Thursday.

Relatives of the 43 students met three days ago in San Cristóbal de las Casas, Chiapas, with members of the Zapatista National Liberation Army (EZLN), which has expressed its willingness to support them.
