

Massive Popular Support for Evo Morales

La Paz, February 20 (RHC-teleSUR) -- Bolivian President Evo Morales has a 76 percent approval rating amongst Bolivians, according to an IPSOS survey released Wednesday.

This figure surpasses the support Morales received in presidential elections held last October, where the president was re-elected with 61 percent of the votes.

The IPSOS poll also revealed that Morales' support is strong throughout the country, even in the Santa Cruz department, which had traditionally been a stronghold for opposition politicians, where Morales registered 74 percent support. The president had the strongest backing from the Pando department with 84 percent support.

A separate survey conducted by the Association of Political Communication last week found that Evo Morales was among some of the most popular presidents in the world.
