Havana, May 29 (RHC) — The French wine company Médocaine des Grands Crus-Bordeaux has expressed interest in marketing its products in Cuba, taking advantage of the local growing tourist market.

A report by the company, which is considered one of the major wine producers in France, reiterated its hope to have an impact on the Cuban market following a recent meeting with executives and experts in the catering Cuban sector, Prensa Latina news reported.

The meeting included a wine presentation and tasting session at Havana's Hotel Nacional in which Giannandrea Talao, on behalf of the Euro-Cuba group, said that the French company has a large offer of products.

Euro-Cuba is a firm set up in 2013 to promote European businesses in Cuba, not only wines but other lines of products as well.
