

U.S. Actors and Personalities Support Iran Nuclear Agreement

New York, July 30 (RHC)-- Several famous American actors and other personalities are supporting the Barack Obama administration's nuclear agreement with Iran, asking the U.S. Congress not to sabotage the deal and make a new war.

In a video posted on YouTube, the actors called on Americans to contact lawmakers and encourage them to back the July 14th accord reached between Tehran and the six world powers in Vienna.

Actors Morgan Freeman, Jack Black, Natasha Lyonne and Farshad Farahat took part in the three-minute video produced by Global Zero, which is an organization fighting for a world without nuclear weapons. Queen Noor of Jordan and retired U.S. Ambassador Thomas Pickering also appear in the video.

The 78-year-old Freeman said without the current agreement "we could be forced into a war with Iran — another dangerous, drawn-out and expensive conflict in the Middle East with many lives lost." "The alternative [to the deal] is war," the Academy Award winner added.

Queen Noor of Jordan said: "We're not actually worried about Iran dropping a nuclear weapon on the United States."
