

Poll Shows Most Americans View Clinton Unfavorably

New York, September 7 (RHC)-- A majority of Americans view Democratic presidential hopeful Hillary Clinton unfavorably, showing her favorable rating near an all-time low, according to a new poll.

The poll conducted by Gallup shows that 51 percent of voters see the former first lady unfavorably and 41 percent favorably.

Hillary Clinton, who is running for the Democratic nomination in the 2016 presidential election, is in the middle of an issue over using a personal e-mail server when she was secretary of state of the United States during President Barack Obama's first term.

During an interview, Clinton refused to apologize for using a personal e-mail account and server. Clinton told MSNBC that "it wasn't the best choice" and said that she should have had two accounts.

"People in the government knew I was using a personal account," the presidential candidate said. "But it would have been better if I had two separate accounts to begin with, and I'm doing all I can now to be transparent about what I had on my work related e-mails. They will be coming out. I wish it was faster. I'm frustrated it's taking a while, but there's a process that needs to be followed."
