

Slovenia Calls in Army Amid Refugee Crisis

Bratislava, October 21 (RHC)-- Slovenia has called in the army as refugees fleeing violence in their home countries are streaming across Slovenian territory in a bid to reach northern Europe as winter approaches.

Earlier today, a major fire erupted at a Slovenian refugee camp. About 20,000 people have arrived in Slovenia since the weekend, when Hungary closed its border with Croatia.

In related news, in Sweden, a suspected arson attack has gutted a shelter for asylum seekers southwest of Stockholm. Fourteen people fled, none were seriously injured. More than a dozen fires have been reported at accommodations for refugees in Sweden this year.
