Isinbayeva and Other Russian Champs Ask IAAF to Rectify Decision

Two-time Olympic Champion in pole vault Yelena Isinbayeva is now heading a list of stars of the Russian track and field who requested "not to kill their dream to compete internationally" in a letter to the International Athletics Associations Federation (IAAF).

The letter was addressed to IAAF president Sebastian Coe and the members of the IAAF council, and calls for rectifying the sanction that might stop Russia from competing in the next Olympic Games, represented by those athletes who never took banned substances.

The crisis was produced by the report issued by an investigating committee of the World Anti Doping Agency (WADA) accusing a group of Russian athletes and sport authorities of violating the rules.

This commission recommended the suspension that IAAF confirmed last Friday, which stops all the programs of the Russian Athletics Federation, including the possibility that all the Russian athletes stay out of competition in the Olympic Games in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, in 2016.

"We can not imagine our lives without athletics. We live with the ability to train and compete with the best athletes in the world, with a dream to participate in the Olympic Games in Rio," says the letter released today at a press conference.

The signatories stated they fully support the hard work to clean the sport of doping, "laborious work by the WADA, the IAAF and the Russian Federation," and requested that the guilty people are punished without looking at their titles or the position they occupy.

During the press conference in which participated Isinbaeva, the high jump Olympic champion Anna Chicherova and world champion in the 110 hurdle meters Serguei Shubenkov, explained that among the signatories of the letter include holders who began his career in 1999 and now cuarte or training for his fifth Olympics.

Next to them, the document explains, athletes who aspire to participate in its first Olympics are also prepared very young.

The signatories are all united by "the perfect reputation, especially in monitoring the anti-doping code and zero tolerance "to the use of these illegal substances.

The warning letter against the disqualification of the FRA, a decision that can isolate many young stars that can be seen deprived of competing in world and European in their youth and children categories tournaments.

"We can not believe that the Council think that this decision is right," says the letter signed by 15 Olympic champions, world, European and medalists in these instances.

"We ask them not to kill our dream," says the text that invokes Coe, Sergei Bubka, Alberto Juantorena and other global glories of the game, who are now part of the IAAF Council.
