

Chemical Giants Dow Chemical and DuPont Consider Merger

New York, December 9 (RHC)-- Two of the world's largest chemical companies, Dow Chemical and DuPont, are considering merging into what could become the second-largest chemical company in the world. Combined, Dow Chemical and DuPont are worth $120 billion.

This year has been one of the biggest years for massive corporate mergers, which include the $150 billion merger of pharmaceutical giants Pfizer and Allergan, the $106 billion merger of beer companies Anheuser-Busch and SABMiller, and the $55 billion merger between telecommunications giants Charter Communications and Time Warner Cable.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/index.php/en/noticias/internacionales/78271-chemical-giants-dow-chemical-and-dupont-consider-merger>

Radio Habana Cuba