Baseball Clinic MLB-FCB

Havana's Latinoamericano became an academy on Wednesday to teach and learn in a workshop organized by the United States Major League Baseball (MLB) and the Cuban Baseball Federation.

Some 150 ball players under 12 years of age from Havana took over the stadium to share with active players from the Major League Baseball and great Cuban baseball figures.

The children took turns in the different areas where expert athletes conducted the work on home plate, infielders, outfielders and pitching to provide the right tools to improve the children's skills.

The group of instructors included MLB players Dominican Nelson Cruz and Cubans José Dariel Abreu, Yasiel Puig, Alexei Ramírez and Brayan Peña as well as Cuban veterans Pedro Medina, Orestes Kindelán, Rey Vicente Anglada, Omar Ajete and Lourdes Gourriel.

The clinic initiative will also take place today at Matanzas' Victoria de Girón stadium as part of the program of a visit that began on Wednesday with a press conference at Hotel Nacional in Havana.
