

Bolivia Set to Increase Natural Gas Exports in 2016

La Paz, January 4 (teleSUR-RHC)-- Bolivian President Evo Morales says that his country is set to increase natural gas exports this year. According to reports from La Paz, Bolivia is the largest exporter of natural gas (LNG) in South America and has already taken steps to boost its liquefied natural gas exports in 2016.

The Bolivian president explained that natural gas exports will reach 1.5 million cubic meters daily within the next few months and that beginning in July, the country will export six million cubic meters. Evo Morales made the announcement when speaking to reporters in the eastern department of Santa Cruz.
