

International Forum Pays Tribute to Cuban National Hero

Havana, January 25 (RHC)-- Scholars, politicians and several Nobel Peace Prize winners are attending the 2nd International Conference "With All and for the Good of All" in Havana, to reflect on the ideas of Cuban National Hero Jose Martí.

The forum, sponsored by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), will run until January 28th, birth date anniversary of Martí.

According to organizers of the event, the forum aims at encouraging debates based on plurality of thought with Martí's ethical thinking at the service of dialogue and understanding.

Participants will address major problems pending on humanity and current options to solve them, including difficulties and risks posed by new information technologies and the necessary access by all to education and culture to fully meet human rights.

The conference will also look at the significance of solidarity in today's world; the presence and universality of Martí's thinking, the importance of the Community of Latin American and Caribbean States (CELAC) and its declaration of this part of the world as a Zone of Peace.
