

Cuba and U.S. Address Migration and Human Trafficking

Miami, February 5 (RHC)-- Cuban and U.S. representatives held a technical meeting in the city of Miami on Thursday to address ways to increase bilateral collaboration on migration and the fight against human trafficking.

According to the Cuban Foreign Ministry, the meeting was held in a respectful and professional environment as the two sides agreed to advance joint work in the area and sign accords to formalize exchange initiatives in an effort to effectively stop human trafficking. The two sides also agreed to keep holding these kind of technical meetings in the future.

The Cuban delegation was headed by Colonel Mario Mendez, Chief of the Identification, Immigration at the Interior Ministry and made up of official from that institution and from the Cuban Foreign Ministry.

On the U.S. side were representatives of the Immigration and Customs Enforcement and the Homeland Security Department, along with officials from the U.S. Departments of State and Justice.
